

Mission Essential Task List

The Mission Essential Task List (METL) is a list of essential tasks required for DOE/NNSA protective force assignments that are based upon fundamental protection objectives and site-specific protection plans to defend against malevolent acts as defined by threat policies and other DOE directives. METLs are designed to establish unity of purpose and effort within DOE/NNSA and to ensure operational efficiencies.

The Department-wide mission-essential tasks applicable to DOE/NNSA protective force services are the following:*

- 1) DETECT: Identify, locate, and assess the threat through active and passive means using human and technological assets and programmatic processes.
- 2) DETER: Discourage and interrupt progress of the threat through active and passive means using human and technological assets.
- 3) DENY: Engage, interdict, and neutralize the threat through active means using human and technological assets.
- 4) RECAPTURE: Repossess and secure assets on site through active means using human and technological assets.
- 5) RECOVER: Repossess and secure assets off site through active and passive means using human and technological assets while in contact with threat.
- 6) RECONSTITUTE: Ensure continuity of protection and restore normal operations following an emergency situation.

This task list forms the basis for all mission essential training. Sites must develop Site-Specific Supporting Tasks (SSST) and Required Supporting Training (RST) to supplement the METL based on essential requirements that may be unique to each facility or protection strategy.

- SSSTs are comprised of leader, individual, and collective tasks and are tied to specific conditions and standards at each site. A comprehensive set of over 95% of potential SSSTs is developed for “plug and play” use by all DOE/NNSA sites and will be provided to the contractor. The remaining 5% are developed by the individual sites.
- RST is comprised of required annual training not directly linked to security mission accomplishment (e.g., safety, human capital, armorer, and instructor training).

Defense Nuclear Security and site subject matter experts have developed an Enterprise Mission Essential Task List (EMETL)-based framework consisting of protective force tasks, conditions, and standards at the collective, leader, and individual levels. Protective force contractor management must use these to prepare, document, and execute the protective force training program. The following pages provide more detailed examples of tasks, conditions and standards for each EMETL element. These examples demonstrate the ability to customize protective force training programs for site-specific requirements.

*Recapture/Recover training is not required for the ETTP and FBC missions.

TASK: E-DETECT-001 DETECT
CONDITION: Adversary elements are assumed to be active in Protective Force's area of operations.
STANDARD: Identify, locate, and assess threat through active and passive means using human and technological assets and programmatic processes.
